1. Which measure may be necessary in the hearing test?

A. SRT

B. MCL

C. TD

D. speech discrimination

Understanding speech at a comfortable listening level is essential because it reveals how well a person can actually comprehend spoken language, not just hear sounds. A speech-discrimination (word recognition) test measures this functional ability by asking the person to identify or repeat words or sentences at a given loudness. This information is critical for deciding whether amplification will meaningfully improve communication and for setting expectations and counseling. Pure-tone thresholds or loudness measures (like the level at which speech is heard or is most comfortable) show detection and comfort, but they don't tell you how well speech understanding will translate in real life. So, the discrimination measure is often necessary to gauge practical benefit from hearing devices and to tailor the plan accordingly.

2. Hours beyond 20 are not credited in the next biennial period.

A. Hours beyond 20 are not credited in the next biennial period.

B. Hours beyond 20 are credited in the next biennial period.

C. All CEUs beyond 20 are void.

D. The next biennial period is extended to accommodate them.

The situation tests how CE credits carry over between two-year licensure cycles. In this rule set, you must complete 20 hours of continuing education in a biennial period, and hours earned beyond that 20 do not carry forward to the next cycle. Each new two-year period starts with a fresh 20-hour requirement, regardless of how many extra CE hours you earned in the previous period. So the correct statement is that hours beyond 20 are not credited in the next biennial period. This matters because it prevents overloading one cycle with extra credits and ensures every licensee meets a fresh education standard every two years. The idea isn't that extra hours are void or that the period is extended; it's simply that they don't count toward the next cycle's requirement.

3. Which of the following options correctly reflects the treatment of CEUs beyond 20 in the next biennial period?

A. They count toward the next biennial period.

B. They are carried forward to the next renewal cycle.

C. They are subject to board review for credit.

D. They are not credited in the next biennial period.

In New Jersey, CEU credits are reset for each renewal cycle, with a requirement of 20 CEU hours per biennial period. Credits earned beyond that 20 do not carry over to the next biennial period; they aren't credited in the next cycle. This keeps each renewal period aligned with current standards and requires you to earn a fresh set of 20 CEUs every two years, regardless of any excess earned previously.

4. The training shall consist of which components?

A. 40 hours with the audiometer

B. 160 hours of hearing aid dispenser procedures

C. Reading all the books and articles relation to hearing aid dispensing specified in a list by the committee

D. All of the above

The training must include all three components, so the best choice is the one that combines them. In New Jersey, a comprehensive training program for hearing aid dispensers is required to have: 40 hours dedicated to working with the audiometer to build proficiency in audiometric testing; 160 hours of hands-on hearing aid dispenser procedures to gain practical experience in fittings, verification, and related clinical tasks; and reading all books and articles related to hearing aid dispensing that the committee lists to ensure up-to-date knowledge of standards, safety, ethics, and regulatory requirements. Because each element targets a different aspect of professional competence, the program must encompass all of them.

5. When will the committee refund the examination fee?

A. Only if the application is rejected by the committee or withdrawn by the applicant within 14 days after receipt

B. If the applicant fails to sit for the examination

C. The committee never refunds examination fees

D. The fee is refunded automatically after 30 days

Understanding when refunds are allowed hinges on timing and outcome. The policy specifies that the examination fee is refunded only if the application is rejected by the committee or if the applicant withdraws within 14 days after receipt. This creates a narrow window tied to the status of the application, not to later events. If the applicant does not sit for the exam, the fee isn't refunded because the service to administer the exam has already been provided. A blanket rule of never refunding, or refunding automatically after 30 days, doesn't match the stated policy. So the only scenario that justifies a refund is rejection or withdrawal within the 14-day window.

6. What is the maximum number of temporary licensees a sponsor may supervise at one time?

A. No more than two

B. No more than three

C. No more than four

D. No limit

Supervision limits are about ensuring adequate oversight when a sponsor guides temporary licensees. The sponsor must be a licensed hearing aid dispenser responsible for the supervisee's practice, and the board wants to maintain close, hands-on supervision to protect patient safety and ensure quality care. Limiting to two temporary licensees at one time makes this feasible so the sponsor can review cases, sign off on procedures, and address any issues promptly. If there were more, the sponsor wouldn't be able to provide the direct, ongoing supervision required, increasing risk to patients and noncompliance with board rules. Therefore, the maximum is no more than two temporary licensees supervised at once. The other options would either overstate the supervisory capacity or ignore the board's explicit limit.

7. Is the license valid within the 30 days after expiration?

A. Yes

B. No

C. Only with temporary permit

D. Only with board approval

The key idea here is that there is a grace period after expiration during which licensure remains valid for renewal. In New Jersey, if a hearing aid dispenser license expires, there is a 30-day window in which you can renew and the license is treated as active for that renewal period. This means you don't lose licensure or have an automatic lapse during that first 30 days as long as renewal is submitted within the window. No temporary permit or extra board approval is needed to keep the license valid during this grace period. If you miss that 30-day window, then the license would no longer be valid and you'd need to follow reinstatement or reapplication procedures per board rules.

8. On what date does the training period commence?

A. The date the license is issued

B. The date the training permit is issued

C. The date the sponsor approves

D. The date the exam is passed

The training period starts when the training permit is issued. That permit is the official authorization allowing the trainee to begin supervised practice under a sponsor. Without that permit, you can't start the supervised training hours. Issuing a license comes later, after completing the training and other requirements, so that date isn't the point at which training begins. Similarly, approval by the sponsor or the date the exam is passed don't by themselves authorize starting the supervised training; the permit is the formal trigger.

9. What is the application fee?

A. 100

B. 25

C. 50

D. 75

The key idea is the cost required to submit your licensure application. This fee funds the board's processing of your submission, including review of credentials and any required background checks. The amount specified in the current rules is fifty dollars, which is the sum you submit with your application. The other figures are just distractors. Always verify the latest board guidance because fees can change over time.

SAMPLE

10. What is the fee for a duplicate or replacement of a biennial registration certificate?

A. 25

B. 15

C. 30

D. 40

When you need a duplicate or replacement of a biennial registration certificate, the board charges a fixed replacement fee. The fee is twenty-five dollars. This amount is set in the board's fee schedule and applies regardless of the reason you need a new certificate. Other dollar amounts in the schedule cover different services, such as initial issuance or renewals, but they don't apply to issuing a duplicate certificate.
